GANANOQUE

"CANADIAN GATEWAY TO THE THOUSAND ISLANDS."

IN THE broad blue St. Lawrence River, easily reached from all the great traffic centers of the Continent, lies this enchanted summer paradise known as 'The Thousand Islands" which, for sheer beauty of its woods and waters and hundreds of picturesque islands cannot be surpassed.

GANANOQUE, midway between Montreal and Toronto, is the best center from which to explore the Thousand Islands and their intricate winding channels. Here excellent hotel accommodation may be obtained, while there is a splendid 18-hole golf course and an attractive tourists' camp in the town, and every facility for boating, swimming, fishing, dancing and for making a thoroughly enjoyable holiday.

Ivy Lea reached through Lansdowne, is another delightful spot on the Canadian shore of the St. Lawrence, with splendid hotel accommodation.

The Thousand Islands begin near Kingston at the outlet of Lake Ontario, extending down the river to Brockville, or over fifty miles, and representing every variety of island to be found on the globe. There are tiny islands of bare rock with a few solitary pines, others a little larger, upon which pretty little summer cottages have been built, and great island kingdoms with palatial summer villas, and luxurious hotels rising among the trees. Everywhere piers and boat-houses are to be seen. Motor boats flit here, there and everywhere, filled with merry parties visiting back and forth among the cottages and hotels. Sight-seeing yachts leave the various resorts frequently each day for tours among the islands. Motor boats may be rented at moderate charges for any length of time. Several large islands have been set aside by the Government as Park Reserves, and offer ideal camping facilities for tourists.

Plan the Summer Holidays to visit Gananoque and the Thousand Islands.
